

Historic Preservation

Barbara Stocklin, Historic Preservation Officer

barbara.stocklin@phoenix.gov

Program Goal

The Historic Preservation Office identifies, preserves, protects and enhances significant historic and prehistoric resources within the City of Phoenix.

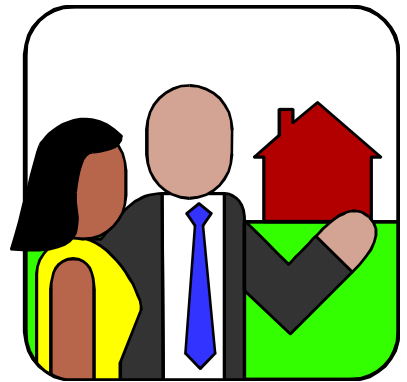

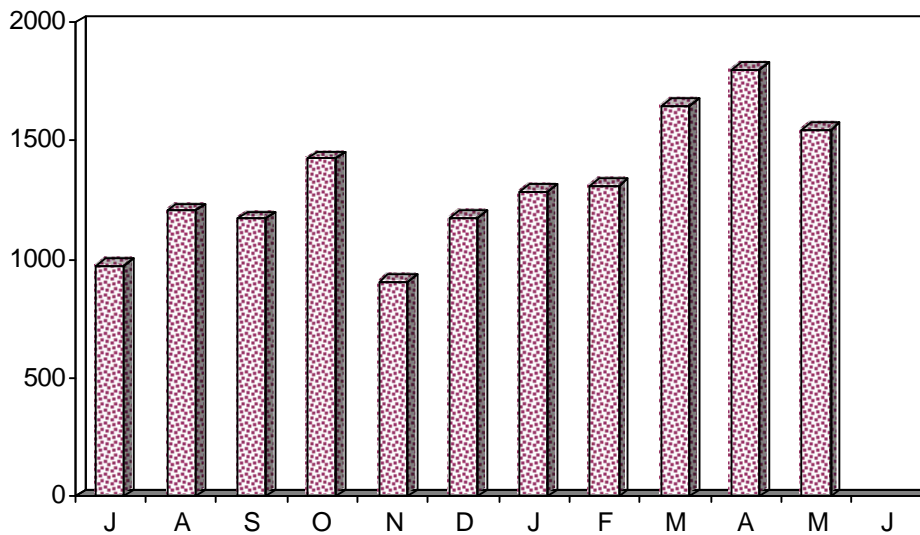

Key Services

Identify historic properties, list eligible properties on Phoenix Historic Property Register and National Register of Historic Places, review applications for City construction and demolition permits, review City projects for compliance with federal environmental regulations, administer incentive programs, and conduct education and outreach activities.

Phone: (602) 261-8699

Persons Assisted

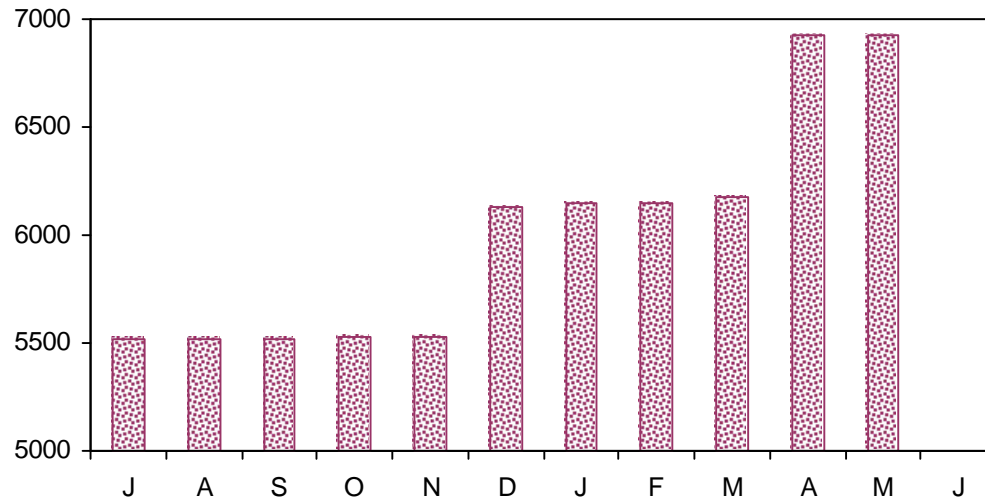

City Permit Applications Reviewed

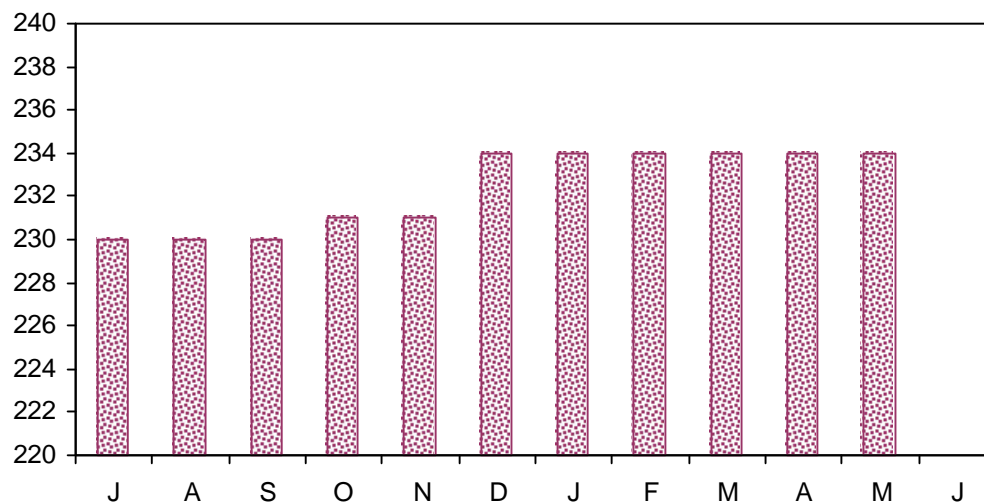

Historic Preservation ³/₄ continued

Properties Listed in Phoenix Historic Property Register Program to Date

Properties with Conservation Easements
Program to Date

Historic Preservation ³/₄ continued

City Investment in Private Rehabilitation Projects Fiscal Year to Date

Comments/Highlights

On May 21, 2003, the City Council approved historic preservation overlay zoning for the Col. Edward Power Conway house, a historic rural-estate property located at 7625 N. 10th Street.

The designation of this historic property brings the number of properties individually listed on the City's historic register to 134. With this designation, there are 6,926 properties listed on the Phoenix Historic Property Register. This number includes properties in 35 residential historic districts.